

Mark McIntyre, Director, Government Security Programs, Microsoft

Mark McIntyre is the Director for Government Security Programs within Microsoft Worldwide Public Sector's Government Engagement Programs team. In this capacity Mark runs Microsoft's Government Security Program (GSP), the company's source code access initiative for national governments; and the Child Exploitation Tracking System (CETS), Microsoft's tool to assist law enforcement agencies in protecting children from sexual exploitation. Mark's primary responsibilities are working with worldwide governments in the public safety and national defense sectors to help them protect their citizens. Prior to joining Microsoft, Mark spent 11 years with the United States government.